May cut off funding if US schools do not open, says Trump

Harvard and MIT said on Wednesday that they had filed a lawsuit against the Trump administration over a directive that would strip foreign students of their visas if their coursework was entirely online.

The White House measure, announced on Monday, was seen as an effort to pressure universities into reopening their gates and abandoning the cautious approaches that many have announced they would adopt to reduce transmission of the coronavirus.

"The order came down without notice — its cruelty surpassed only by its recklessness," said Harvard's President Lawrence S Bacow in a message to the university community.

"It appears that it was designed purposefully to place pressure on colleges and universities to open their on-campus classrooms for in-person instruction this fall, without regard to concerns for the health and safety of students, instructors, and others."

The directive's effect may be to dramatically reduce the number of international students enrolling in the fall. Together with delays in processing visas as a result of the pandemic, immigrant advocates say the new rules, which must still be finalised this month, might discourage many overseas students from attending American universities, where they often pay full tuition.

"The order came down without notice — its cruelty surpassed only by its recklessness," said Harvard's President Lawrence S Bacow

But the concern that their campuses could become coronavirus clusters has prompted many universities to adopt measures to reduce exposure, from requiring masks in classrooms to limiting social activities to reducing the number of students invited back to campus. Many have announced a hybrid approach that would provide some in-person classes but offer a significant amount of coursework virtually. Such changes could put foreign students' visas, known as F-1 visas, at risk under the new rules.

Meanwhile, Trump on Wednesday threatened to cut off funding to schools that do not open in the fall and criticised a federal health agency's guidelines for reopening schools as "very tough and expensive."

US Prez cheated on his SATs, score got him into Wharton, niece says in book

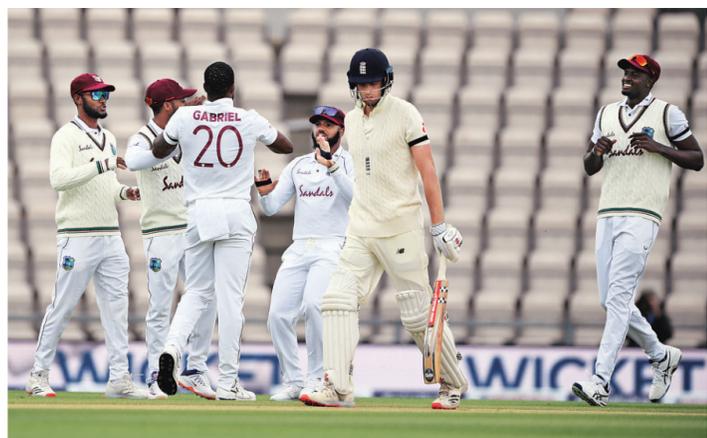

US President Donald Trump's niece offers a scathing portrayal of her uncle in a new book, Too Much and Never Enough, How My Family Created the World's Most Dangerous Man, blaming a toxic family for raising a narcissistic, damaged man who poses an immediate danger to the public, according to a copy obtained by The Associated Press.

Mary L Trump, a psychologist, writes that Trump's re-election would be catastrophic and that "lying, playing to the lowest common denominator, cheating, and sowing division are all he knows". In her book, Mary Trump, who is estranged from her uncle, makes several revelations, including alleging that Trump paid a friend to take the SATs in his place.

China, US trade tit-for-tat visa curbs

China said it will impose visa restrictions on US citizens who have engaged in "egregious" behaviour over Tibet, in apparent retaliation against US restrictions on Chinese officials. US Secretary of State Pompeo earlier the US would restrict visas for some Chinese officials because Beijing obstructs travel to Tibet by US diplomats, journalists and tourists and "human rights abuses" in the Himalayan region.
